General Lee's Grandsons.
I have been much ridiculed lately by two or three different parties for having referred to the grandsons of General Robert E. Lee. I made the remark that General W. H. F. Lee married Miss Tabb Bolling, of Petersburg, and died leaving two sons. This statement was most emphatically denied, and I feel that all Virginians should be acquainted with the family history of our great chieftain. There is no better way than through the query columns of your paper, to feel sure that you will agree with me and will enlighten the coming generation in Virginia history. Being an educator, I am much interested in this matter.
M. L. R.

Petersburg.
General Robert E. Lee's grandsons are: Colonel Robert E. of Ravenscroft, and George Bolling Lee, sons of the late General William H. F. Lee and Mrs. Tabb Bolling Lee, his wife.

British at Hampton.
Was it 1813 or 1814 that the British captured Hampton? RANDOLPH.

In May, 1812, General Mary Tucker McGill's "History of Virginia," page 253.

Without Benefit of Clergy.
In the old Catholic times in England when a person died without having a priest by his side, did they not call this dying "without benefit of clergy?"

Please answer to settle a discussion.
A. R. H.
If "without benefit of the clergy" is taken to mean without the privileges and offices of the church which the clergy administered, such a person would not, however, be considered as dying outside the membership of the church and would be entitled to Christian burial as only personal rejection could cut a human being off from the blessings which the church bestowed. In the Middle Ages of England the term "benefit of clergy" meant the exemption from the jurisdiction of the secular courts, which was accorded to clergymen and to all who had been tonsured and wore the ecclesiastical dress, and was shared in by monks and nuns.

Pope and Sovereigns.
1. Who is Pope of Rome? Who is Prime minister of England?
2. What are the present rulers of leading countries of Europe?
I shall be very grateful to you for the desired information.
M. C. McC.

Chase City.
1. Pope Plus X. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman.
2. Franz Josef I, Emperor of Austria; Leopold III, King of Belgium; Frederick VIII, King of Denmark; William II, Emperor of Germany; President of the French Republic, M. Armand Fallieres; George V, King of Greece; Victor Emmanuel III, King of Italy; Haakon VII, King of Norway; Nicholas II, Emperor of Russia; Manuel II, King of Portugal; Carol I, King of Rumania; Peter I, King of Serbia; Alfonso XIII, King of Spain; Gustaf V, King of Sweden; Ferdinand, Prince of Bulgaria.

General Lee's Sons.
Will the Times-Dispatch kindly tell us how many sons General Robert E. Lee left? Did not his son, General W. H. F. Lee, marry Miss Tabb Bolling, of Petersburg?
"LITTLE RBB."

Three sons—W. H. F. Lee, G. W. C. Lee and R. E. Lee, Jr. General W. H. F. Lee married Miss Tabb Bolling, of Petersburg.

R. C. WALKER.

1. To possibly bring about peace between the Northern and Southern States. President Davis of the Confederacy sent as commissioners to the conference Vice-President Stephens, Hon. R. M. T. Hunter and Hon. John Campbell, of the so-called blood purifiers. You are requested to proceed to Washington city for an informal conference upon the issues involved in the existing war, and for the purpose of securing peace to the two countries.

2. In the report of the Confederate commissioners to President Davis as to what occurred at the conference held February 5, 1865, at Hampton Roads, the commissioners state that "during the conference the proposed abolition of slavery was discussed, and it was agreed that the two countries should meet again to discuss the question of slavery."

3. The United States owns no land in Africa. It did not own any there.

To Remove Warts.
Do warts come from handling tooth-sticks? If not, from what? D. W. V.

A wart is a skin tumor, which bears no relation to tooth-sticks or the handling of them. To cure a wart dampen with the tip of a small piece of cotton with the purest and best tooth powder. Do this frequently during the day, and in the course of a month the wart will drop off.

The Poe Cult and Other Papers, With a New Memoir.

By Eugene L. Didier. Broadway Publishing Co., New York and Baltimore. $1.50.

Although a little late among the centennial publications of Edgar Allan Poe, this volume will be found none the less important and interesting. Within the 301 pages the author has well condensed his twenty-three separate articles published in various American magazines during the past thirty-five years, besides giving a revised memoir. The name of Mr. Didier is favorably known to all Poe students as among the first to make efforts to lift the early cloud from the poet's name and fame. During the latter days of Mrs. Clemm's life, spent in Baltimore, Mr. Didier was enabled to see her frequently and ascertained all that she was disposed to tell about her favorite "Eddie," as she called him. Towards the last she appeared to have become suspicious about giving information concerning Poe, and took with her to the grave some information that she might as well have left the world of letters. The contents of at least two of the letters she was known to hold and evidently destroyed are known in Richmond, Va. She retained Poe's own sketch of his life, and gave a very full account of her acquaintance with the poet. The latter dark periods of 1827 and 1831-33. While not familiar with all the details of these years, yet she knew the general outlines, which might have perished with her death if same had not been preserved by Mr. Didier's memoir is well written, and throughout shows Poe in a favorable light. A chapter of the new book gives the rise of the Poe cult since 1875, and the great money value of original Poe publications; another is on the "Real Poe," and a third on the "Ideal Poe." Incidents in the poet's boyhood. In the latter Mrs. Standard and the graveyard legend is retained. The story of Poe's loves and female friends is among the most interesting in the volume. Mr. Didier had a personal correspondence with Mrs. Whitman and gives a very full account of her romance with the poet. The letter in which she claims that the publication of Poe's correspondence with her was unauthorized sounds strange at this day; particularly when it appears that Mr. Ingram, Poe's English biographer, claims to have had the custody of the late published correspondence in the British Empire, alleging prior copyright franchises. In connection with Mr. Ingram, the chapter on his life of Poe and that on "The Discoverer of Poe" sheds some new light. The published extracts of Mr. Ingram's letter to Mrs. Shows family regarding loaned letters and manuscripts will likely bring some further explanation of these matters from Mr. Ingram. The chapter concerning the "Virginia Poe" written by Professors Harrison, Kent and Stewart, is quite severe in criticism, but the illustrations are quoted to justify the conclusions reached. The estimate of Stoddard's life of Poe as given seems near correct. There are separate chapters on Poe's death and the monument over his grave. Mr. Didier has a good knowledge of the portraits of Poe, and besides his own information tells what Mrs. Whitman told him on that subject. The early recollections given of both Professor Joseph H. Clark and General L. B. Northrop, of South Carolina, add to the information concerning Poe's Richmond school days and his West Point career. In the concluding chapter Mr. Didier says that the splendor of Poe's fame, the extraordinary and distinct quality of his genius, and the universality of its recognition made the centennial of his birth on the 19th of January, 1809, one of the most interesting events in the literary history of the United States, if not in the world. In quoting Father Tabb's "Hall of Fame" poetry on Poe, Mr. Didier speaks of the author as the blind poet of the South. The writer had a letter a short while ago, entirely in the hand of Father Tabb, and still containing a date since with his autograph signed to same. Father Tabb is not yet blind and has hopes with proper treatment that his impaired eyesight will improve. A Baltimore newspaper article a few months ago conveyed the impression that Father Tabb was blind.

Old Friends: Literary Recollections of Other Days.
By William Winter. Moffat, Yard & Co., $2.00 net.

Mr. Winter says of himself in a preface to his "Old Friends": "I was introduced into the company of our authors early in life, having published my first book, which led to acquaintance with some of them, in 1854, and I have had friendly intercourse with many of them extending over a period of more than thirty years. Some of my recollections are of a kind that are not expressed with all the kindness that is consistent with truth, and perhaps my readers will find a little pleasure in reading the account of the same. In the early days of my life, where the idols of my youthful enthusiasm and the comrades of my pen remain unchanged."

The book contains papers on Henry W. Longfellow, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Bayard Rustin, Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins, George William Curtis, and others, and overflows with personality in anecdote and reminiscence. The paper on Longfellow contains a lengthy reference to Edgar Allan Poe, with Mr. Winter's estimate of Poe expressed in the following words: "He was a brilliant and an extraordinary man. The treasures of imaginative, creative, beautiful art, in prose as well as verse, that he contributed to American literature are permanent and precious; and nothing is more contemptible than the disparagement of his memory that continually proceeds through the pages of the score of his imitators. Poe died in 1849, aged forty, leaving works that fill ten closely packed volumes. No man achieves a result like that whose brain is ruined by stimulants."

Mr. Winter ranks Longfellow as the first American poet, and says that a beautiful tribute. He closes his paper with this summing up of Longfellow's life: "He was a man of great power, a man of great energy, a man of great intellect, a man of great heart, a man of great soul, a man of great spirit, a man of great faith, a man of great love, a man of great hope, a man of great charity, a man of great kindness, a man of great gentleness, a man of great meekness, a man of great lowliness, a
